TO MAKE ACCESS
TO THE CELLAR
MORE CONVENIENT

When a home is being remodeled, it is often possible to provide an indoor entrance to the cellar which has only an outside entrance.

_____ at _____, calls attention to the fact
spec.) (institution)
that there is an economy of space when one stairway is immediately under another flight and basement stairs can often be put in that way, but other arrangements are also advantageous. A room on the first floor may be large enough to permit space being taken off of the basement stairs. If there is a back entry, the basement stairway might be located there, giving protection from bad weather without altering the interior plan of the house.

Several houseplans in Farmers' Bulletin 1749, Modernizing Farmhouses, show how inside basement stairs may be installed when a house is being remodeled. It may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., at 10 cents a copy.
